

Society of Tennessee Archivists
Annual Meeting 2019 – Archives in the Real World
Call for Session Proposals

The Society of Tennessee Archivists will hold its 2019 annual meeting October 23-25 at Tennessee Tech University in Cookeville. The Society invites session proposals touching on the 2019 theme: Archives in the Real World. This year's theme focuses on the relationship between archival theory and practice, including the challenges, problems, resolutions, and hands-on experiences that arise when bringing the two together in the everyday archival world.

Topics covered may include:

- The experiences of lone arrangers and smaller institutions in managing budget, storage, preservation, and other issues*
- Challenges reconciling with gaps or silences in collections*
- Revisiting the debate over access versus preservation*
- Insights into managing electronic records and the future of digital archives*

Other topics may be considered. Open to members and non-members. Students are especially encouraged to submit session proposals. Sessions are typically 45 minutes to 1 hour, and can include 2 or 3 presentations. A session will be created from submitted individual papers.

Submission guidelines: Please include the presentation title, an abstract (up to 500 words), your name, institutional affiliation, and contact information (email and phone number). If submitting a panel, then include the names and contact information of each panel participant.

Email proposals to Sarah.Calise@mtsu.edu on or before Friday, September 6, 2019.

For more information on the Society of Tennessee Archivists, please visit <http://tennesseearchivists.org>